

W O E

In gentle verse the witty told their flame,
And grac'd their choicest songs with Emma's name. Prior.
3. Sarcastick; full of taunts.
Honeycomb, who was so unmercifully witty upon the women, has given the ladies ample satisfaction by marrying a farmer's daughter. Addison's Spectator.
WITWAE. n. f. [from wife.] A bird.
To WIFE. v. n. [from wife.] To marry; to take a wife.
Were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatick seas,
I come to wife it wealthily in Padua.
The ancient saying is no heresy.
Hanging and wifery goes by destiny. Shakespeare.
A shop of all qualities that man loves woman for; besides that hook of wifery, fairness, which strikes the eye. Shakespeare.
Design or chance makes others wife.
But nature did this match contrive.
To WIFE. v. a.
1. To match to a wife.
She dying gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wife'd,
To give it her. Shakespeare's Othello.
2. To take for a wife.
If he have the condition of a faint, and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should strive me than wife me. Shakespeare.
WITVELY. adv. [from wife.] Belonging to a wife.
Basilus could not abstain from praising Parthenia, as the perfect picture of a womanly virtue, and wifely faithfulness. Sid.
WIVES. n. f. The plural of wife.
A man of his learning should not so lightly have been carried away with old wives tales, from approbation of his own reason. Spenser's Ireland.
WIZARD. n. f. [from wife.] A conjurer; an inchanter; a he-witch. It had probably at first a laudable meaning.
Patience, good lady; wizards know their times. Shakespeare.
He hearkens after prophecies and dreams.
And says, a wizard told him that by G
His issue disinherited should be. Shakespeare's Richard III.
That damn'd wizard, hid in fly disguise,
For so by certain signs I knew, had met
Already, ere my best speed could prevent
The aidless innocent lady his will'd prey.
The prophecies of wizards old
Increases'd her terror, and her fall foretold.
The wily wizard must be caught.
For, unconstrain'd, he nothing tells for nought. Dryden.
WO. n. f. [from wife.] Sorrow; misery; calamity.
Grief, sorrow; misery; calamity.
That I stand up and have ingenuities feeling
Of my huge sorrows! better I were distract;
So should my thoughts be fever'd from my griefs;
And woes by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves. Shakespeare's King Lear.
So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woe weary'd tongue is still.
Her rash hand in evil hour,
Forth reaching to the fruit, Eve pluck'd, the eat:
Earth felt the wound; and nature from her seat
Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe
That all was lost. Milton's Paradise Lost.
O'er dreary wastes, they weep each other's wo. Pope.
2. It is often used in denunciations, wo be; or in exclamations of sorrow wo is; anciently wo worth; pa puppy, Saxon.
All is but lip wisdom which wants experience: I now, wo is me, do try what love can do. Sidney.
3. That poor soldier, that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms; whose naked breast
Stept before shields of proof, cannot be naked. Shakespeare.
Many of our princes, woe the while!
Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood. Shakespeare.
Happy are they which have been my friends; and wo to my lord chief-justice. Shakespeare's Henry IV.
How ye, wo worth the day.
We be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves. Exod. xxx. 2.
If God be such a being as I have described, wo to the world if it were without him: this would be a thousand times greater loss to mankind than the extinguishing of the sun. Tillotson.
We to the vanquish'd woe? Dryden's Albion.
3. A denunciation of calamity; a curse.
Can there be a wo or curse in all the stores of vengeance equal to the malignity of such a practice; of which one single instance could involve all mankind in one universal confusion. South's Sermon.
4. Wo seems in phrases of denunciation or imprecation to be a substantive; and in exclamation an adjective, as particularly in the following lines.
We are we, fit! you may not live to wear
All your true followers out. Shak. Antony and Cleopatra.

W O L

5. Wo is used by Shakespeare for a stop or cessation; from the particle wo pronounced by carters to their horses when they would have them stop.
Love's a mighty lord; wo should it
There is no wo to his correction. Shakespeare.
WOAD. n. f. [from wo, Saxon.] A plant. Shakespeare.
The flower consists of four leaves, which are disposed in form of a cross; out of whose flower cup rises the point, flat at the edge, gaping two ways, having but one cell, in which is contained for the most part one oblong seed; is cultivated in England for the use of dyers, who use it for laying the foundation of many colours. Miller.
In times of old, when British nymphs were known
To love no foreign fashions like their own;
When drefs was monstrous, and fig-leaves the mode,
And quality put on no paint but woad. Garth.
WOOLCOKE. n. f. [from wool, Saxon.] A lost in wo; distracted in wo; overwhelmed with sorrow. Shakespeare.
So dull, so dead in look, so woolcoke,
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And wuld have told him half his Troy was burn'd;
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue
Tanc'd he saw his life's joy set at naught.
So woolcoke was he with pains of love. Paisley.
WOFT. The obsolete participle passive from TO WAF.
A braver choice of dauntless spirits
Than now the English bottoms have wof,
Did never float upon the swelling tide. Shakespeare.
WOFUL. adj. [from wo, Saxon.] Sorrowful; afflicted; mourning.
The woful Gynecia, to whom rest was no ease, had left her loathed lodgings, and gotten herself into the solitary places those deary were full of.
How many woful widows left to bow
To sad disgrace! Daniel's Civil War.
In a tower, and never to be loos'd,
The woful captive kinsmen are inclos'd. Dryden.
2. Calamitous; afflictive.
3. Wretched; paltzy; forry.
What woful stuff this madrigal would be,
In some itan'd hackney-fommeteer, or me?
But let a lord once own the happy lines,
How the wit brightens! how the style refines! Pope.
WOFULLY. adv. [from woful.] Sorrowfully; mournfully.
1. Sorrowfully; mournfully.
2. Wretchedly; in a sense of contempt.
He who would pass such a judgment upon his condition, as shall be confirmed at that great tribunal, from which there lies no appeal, will find himself wofully deceived, if he judges of his spiritual estate by any of these measures. South.
WOULD. n. f. [from wo, Saxon.] Whether singly or jointly, in the names of places, signifies a plain open country; from the Saxon wo, a plain and a place without wood. Gilpin's Camden.
Wild and would with the Saxons signified a ruler or governor; from whence bertwald is a famous governor of ethelwald, a noble governor: bertwald, and by inversion walders, a general of an army. Gilpin's Camden.
WOULF. [from wo, Saxon; wolf, Dutch.]
1. A kind of wild dog that devours sheep.
Advance our waving colours on the walls,
Refeu'd is Orleans from the English wolves. Shakespeare.
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and chuse
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,
Necessity's sharp pinch. Shakespeare's King Lear.
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time,
Thou shouldst have said, go, porter, turn the key,
All cruels else subscib'd. Shakespeare's King Lear.
2. An eating ulcer.
How dangerous it is in sensible things to use metaphorical expressions; and what absurd conceits the vulgar will swallow in the literals, an example we have in our profession, who having called an eating ulcer by the name of wolf, common apprehension conceives a reality therein. Dracut's Vulgar Errors.
WOULFDOG. n. f. [from wolf and dog.]
1. A dog of a very large breed kept to guard sheep.
The luckless prey, how treach'rous tumblers gain;
And dauntless wolfdogs shake the lion's mane. Tieckell.
2. A dog bred between a dog and wolf.
WOULFISH. adj. [from wolf.] Resembling a wolf in qualities or form.

Are wolfish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous. Shakespeare.
I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
Shall scratch thy wolfish visage. Shakespeare's King Lear.
